

WHY ARDEN TRUST

Top three reasons why a financial advisor should get involved with trusts.

1 Capture a greater % of client assets	If your client is the beneficiary of a trust established for his/her benefit, Arden Trust can work with you to transfer the trusteeship of the trust from a bank trust department to Arden Trust and onto your book of business.
2 Capture new assets	A transfer of wealth is currently taking place from the Greatest Generation to the Baby Boomers of more than $12 trillion in assets.<sup>1</sup> A second and even larger wealth transfer, estimated at more than $30 trillion in financial and nonfinancial assets, will continue over the next 30-40 years from the Boomers to their heirs.<sup>1</sup> Arden Trust can provide you with trust strategies to capture some of this transfer of wealth.
3 Protect your current revenue stream	About 86% of heirs intend to fire the advisor used by their parents once they inherit the wealth.<sup>2</sup> An advisor must add four new accounts to compensate for the revenue loss when an account leaves a firm through a generational transfer. By naming Arden Trust as successor trustee in your client's estate planning documents we can help you ensure retention of those assets.

Why should a client use a corporate trustee?

Impartiality	Responsibility	Continuity	Reporting
A corporate trustee is not influenced by family relationships and can make discretionary trust decisions without jeopardizing personal family relationships.	A corporate trustee is regulated and regularly examined by a state or federal agency.	A corporate trustee will provide continuous, consistent administration for the entire term of the trust.	A corporate trustee uses systems and processes for timely, accurate and compliant reporting of all trust activity.
